Architect(s):
Landscape architect(s):
House extant: unconfirmed
Historical notes:

Alger Hiss was the son of Charles Alger and Lavinia Hughes Hiss of Baltimore, MD.

Priscilla Harriett Fansler Hiss was the daughter of Thomas L. Fansler of Roadside Acres in Frazier, PA. She had previously been married to Francis Thayer Hobson, the president of the book publishing firm of William Morrow.

*At Harvard Law School Hiss was a protégé of Felix Frankfurter who later became a United States Supreme Court Justice. He went on to clerk for United States Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr. In 1933 Hiss embarked on his career in the federal government as an attorney in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. He then worked for the Nye Commission prior to transferring to the Justice Department as an assistant to Woodrow Wilson's son-in-law Francis B. Sayre. Subsequently, Hiss served as special assistant to the Director of the Office of Far Eastern Affairs and as special assistant and, later, as executive secretary at the Dumbarton Oaks Conference. In 1945 Hiss participated in the Yalta Conference, served as Secretary-General to the United Charter Conference, and became Director of the Office of Special Political Affairs prior to leaving government service in 1946.

In 1948 Whittaker Chambers, an acknowledged Communist, testified to the House Committee on Un-American Activities that Hiss had been a member of the Communist Party. Freshman Congressman Richard M. Nixon spearheaded the committee's investigation of Hiss which resulted in a mistrial to charges of perjury. In 1950 a second trial of Hiss resulted in what is, to this day, a highly controversial verdict of guilty, also to the charge of perjury. Hiss served three years, eight months, and five days in Pennsylvania's maximum security Lewisburg Penitentiary working in the commissary. (The prison is now a super-maximum security prison housing terrorists.) After his release from prison in 1954, Hiss continually filed appeals in an attempt to prove his innocence.

After a two-day search of Soviet intelligence archives in 1991 by Russian archivists, General Volkogonov, the head of the archives, stated that no evidence had been found to confirm that Hiss had ever been a Soviet spy or a member of the Communist Party.

Nixon is reputed to have said that without the Hiss case he would never have become Vice-President or President.

In 1948 Chambers attempted to commit suicide in his mother's home in Lynbrook. [Newsday April 7, 1952.]

Alger and Priscilla Harriet Fansler Hiss' son Anthony married Lois Metzger and lives in NYC.

Alger and Priscilla Fansler Hiss separated in 1959 but did not divorce.

Isabelle Dowden Hiss was the daughter of Dawson and Elsie Ruckelshaus Dowden. Isabelle had previously been married to Malcolm Perry Johnson.

Hiss later relocated to a house on Osborne Lane in East Hampton.

Landscape Architects

When the date of landscaping is known, it has been included in brackets. Since, in some instances, more than one landscape architect worked on an estate and, in some rare instances, the architect who designed the house also designed the estate's grounds, the surname entry should be consulted to determine if anyone else was involved in designing the estate grounds. When the estate owner who contracted for landscaping is known, it is indicated by an asterisk. Original and subsequent estate owners are included in the list.
